TOP RED SPIES UNMASKED

NILES LATHEM, Bureau Chief

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union has been permitted to leave the entire top echelon of its New York intelligence apparatus in place until President Reagan and Soviet Leader Mikhail Gorbachev negotiate the future of the U.S. expulsion order at next week's mini-summit in Iceland, The Post has learned.

Top law enforcement and intelligence officials revealed last night that the Soviets, in response to the presidential expulsion order affecting 25 Russians attached to the UN last month, immediately sent home 14 "lower level" intelligence officials on the U.S. expulsion list.

The remaining 11 on the U.S. list are still in the Soviet mission in New York and represent "the board of directors" of the KGB and GRU (military intelligence) in New York — considered to be one of the most important Soviet espionage networks in the world.

Officials identified the remaining Soviet diplomats who were on the original U.S. expulsion list as:

- Valery Anikeyev, listed as a counselor on the UN roster, who is a "line chief" of the KGB responsible for handling "deep cover" agents.

- Gennady Riabkov, the GRU deputy station chief, officially listed as a first secretary.

- Viktor Sbirunov, listed as first secretary, who is a "senior officer" in the KGB station in New York.

- Vladimir Pustovalov, listed as an attache, who is also a "senior" KGB officer.

- Sergei Mezentsev, listed as a first secretary, who is a KGB officer.

- Gennady Tarasov, listed as an adviser to the Soviet representative to the UN Security Council, identified as a senior KGB officer.

- Leonardas Yanavichyus, listed as a second secretary, who is listed in FBI intelligence files as a KGB officer.

- Gennady Voytenkov, listed as an attache, who is a senior KGB officer.

- Alexander Ushakov, listed as an attache, who is a KGB officer.

Officials said that the FBI has these men and two superiors under tight surveillance.

The two top intelligence officers have previously been identified as Valeriy Savchenko, the KGB station chief who is officially listed as a "counselor" to the UN mission, and Vladislav Skvortsov, the GRU station chief, officially listed as a "senior counselor."

U.S. officials insist all 11 will leave by Oct. 14 regardless of what happens at the Iceland summit.

But Gorbachev, at his Oct. 11-12 meetings with Reagan, is expected to press Reagan to substitute the two officials on the expulsion list for other Soviet employees.
